Principal

This year's Prelude is indeed a very special issue since it marks the 40th Anniversary of Wagar High School. Throughout the years thousands of students have gone forward to become contributing members of society.

Those of you who are leaving Wagar this year will become members of that growing group of alumni. You have been fortunate in having the leadership, commitment and dedication of many hard-working teachers and staff members. I have had the privilege of being your teacher, vice-principal, as well as principal over the last five years. I have watched you grow, mature and develop into fine young men and women, and now comes the time to say farewell and good luck.

I congratulate each and every one of you for your part in making 2003-2004 a most memorable year at Wagar. I wish to extend best wishes, success, happiness and health to all those who will not be returning next year.

I would also like to thank and compliment the Year Book Committee and their Staff Advisors on a job well done in preparing this year's Odyssey.

To the 2004 graduating class

This heartfelt message comes to you on two levels: one as your former teacher, and the second as your present Vice-Principal. You are very dear to me and I love you as if you were my own children.

Although I only taught you for two years and some of you for three, it feels like longer. As your former teacher, I'm proud of your achievements, and confident that you will accomplish much in life. As your present Vice-Principal, I haven't really had to take severe disciplinary action with any of you, which tells me that you've reached a stage of maturity that one should have attained by grade 11.

Go into the future with the knowledge and skills you've acquired along the way. You all have what it takes to be a "somebody" in this world. You are my Children.

And so, as one who has watched your growth, I am pleased to say congratulations!

"Life is what you make it; make it one worth living."

Your vice-principal, your former teacher, and most of all your friend,

Ms. S. Nash

Vice-Principal's Message

Your stay at Wagar High School has hopefully cemented lasting and durable friendships which have helped you to gain a positive self-image and the self-confidence that you will require to reach the limit of your potential. It has been a pleasure knowing all of you. Congratulations to the graduating class of 2003-2004.
